Third Round Even.

Third round-Ketchell bored in with terrible swings at once, and O'Brien clinched. In a hard mix-up both reached the neck and body. O'Brien, in another mix, missed several swings, while Ketchell put in a right over the eye that opened a bloody gash. O'Brien stood at long range then and used his left until he staggered Ketchell with a hook on the jaw, but Ketchell was as atrong as a bull and came back with a velley of swings that made come back with a velley of swings that made the same of the s

Fifth round—O'Brien sailed in with a left on the neck. Ketchell stood up to mm and jarred Jack with a right on the neck. O'Brien got away and then came back with several hot lefts, which drew on boring, but O'Brien shook him off with more left jabs that landed squarely on the mouth and threat. In a half clinch Ketchell landed a left appercut on the jaw just as the bell rang. It was O'Erien's round.

O'Brien's round.

Sixth round—O'Brien began with sharp lefts to the nose and mouth. Ketchell missed a terrific swing for the jaw, but he stepped in with a body punch that brought a clinch. Ketchell took a half dezen lefts in the face, and then bored in with swings that made Jack run away. In a mix O'Brien got a jolt in the neck which made him slip down in a corner but he got up quickly, and as Ketchell rushed, O'Brien nailed him with several.

Seventh round-O'Brien ran away from a hard rush. As O'Brien held on in a clinch, Ketchell walloped him on the neck with a free hand. Ketchell rusined after that, and O'Brien met him with more hard lefts in the mouth and nose. Ketchell kept on boring, however, and O'Brien clinched repeatedly. In a rally they exchanged swings will they alloyed, O'Brien terrority and the second or second o until they clinched. O'Brien in another mix rained blows on Ketchell's neck and jaw until Ketchell was weak in the legs, but he came back gamely, and, with an uppercut in the stomach made O'Brien clinch at the bell.
